

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Judith BEYER is a Research Fellow in the Project Group Legal Pluralism at the Max-Planck-Institute for Social Anthropology, Halle. See further the section 'About the Contributors' in nr. 53/54 of the Journal of Legal Pluralism.

Jennifer CORRIN is Executive Director, Asia Pacific Law, Centre for Public, International and Comparative Law and Associate Professor, TC Beirne School of Law, The University of Queensland. After taking Bachelor's and Master's degrees in law she practised as a solicitor in England. She later qualified as a Barrister in Queensland, and then as a Barrister and Solicitor in Solomon Islands and Fiji. She gained a PhD at Griffith University in 2003. She was formerly Associate Professor of Law at the University of the South Pacific in Vanuatu. Her publications include: (with J. Zorn) Proving Customary Law in the Common Law Courts of the South Pacific. London: British Institute of International and Comparative Law (2002); Civil Procedure and Courts in the South Pacific. London: Cavendish Publishing, 2004; (with D. Paterson) Introduction to South Pacific Law, 2nd edn. Abingdon: Routledge-Cavendish (2007).

Robert HOME is Professor in Land Management at the Law School, Anglia Ruskin University, Chelmsford, United Kingdom. After completing his Ph.D. in Geography at the London School of Economics, he qualified as a chartered town planner, and has published widely on land and planning law. He has edited (with Hilary Lim) Demystifying the Mystery of Capital: Land in Africa and the Caribbean. London: Routledge-Cavendish (2004). He has written articles on land law in Israel/Palestine in Planning Perspectives and Socio-Legal Studies, and contributed to international expert group meetings on Islamic land law.

Amy JACKSON is a Ph.D. candidate of the University of Reading, funded by the Graduate Schools of Social Sciences and Arts and Humanities. She has gained an LLB degree from the University of Reading after a course which included a period at Uppsala Universitet, Sweden under the ERASMUS year abroad program. She gained an LLM from the University of Sussex for a dissertation entitled How Might Legal Pluralist Methods Lead to a Better Understanding of the role of Other Actors in Public International Law? The aim of her Ph.D. thesis is to consider a critical legal pluralist approach to the debate surrounding the choice of women to wear the Islamic veil.

Helene Maria KYED is currently a project researcher at the Danish Institute for International Studies. Born in Denmark, she has a Master Honours degree in Social Anthropology from the University of Aarhus and a PhD degree in International Development Studies from the University of Roskilde. Her publications include: (edited with Lars Buur) State Recognition and Democratization in Sub-Saharan Africa. A New Dawn for Traditional Authorities? Basingstoke: Palgrave-Macmillan (2007); (with Lars Buur and Terezinha C. Silva) State Recognition of Local Authorities and Public Participation: Experiences, Obstacles and Possibilities in Mozambique. Maputo: Ministry of Justice and Danish Institute for International Studies (2007). She has also published articles in Development and Change, Policing and Society and the Journal of Southern African Studies on traditional authority, citizenship, sovereignty and local forms of justice enforcement and policing. She has conducted long-term fieldwork in Mozambique on the state recognition of traditional authorities and the interaction between state and non-state justice and security providers. Particularly, Kyed has addressed the political implications of state-non-state engagements, and addressed theoretical questions concerning competing forms of sovereignty, social ordering and claims to authority. Her current research also engages with the topic of community policing in Sub-Saharan Africa.

Christian LUND is Professor in International Development Studies at Roskilde University. For close to two decades he has worked on land and politics issues in West Africa, primarily in Niger, Ghana and Burkina Faso, with a particular interest in local politics and conflicts over natural resources. He is currently commencing research on similar issues in Laos. He has been a Visiting Scholar at University of California, Berkeley, London School of Economics, Centre for Development Research, Copenhagen, and École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales (School of Advanced Social Studies) in Marseille. His principal recent publications include: (edited) Twilight Institutions. Public Authority and Local Politics in Africa. Oxford: Wiley-Blackwell (2007); Local Politics and the Dynamics of Property in Africa. Cambridge and New York: Cambridge University Press (2008); (edited with Thomas Sikor) The Politics of Possession: Property, Authority, and Access to Natural Resources. London: Wiley-Blackwell (2009). In addition to other books which he has written and edited he has published in journals such as Africa, Development and Change, Journal of Modern African Studies, and World Development.

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

L. Jane McMILLAN holds the Canada Research Chair in Indigenous Peoples and Sustainable Communities at the Department of Anthropology, St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, Nova Scotia, Canada. She holds a Master's degree from Dalhousie University and a PhD from the University of British Columbia. She is a legal anthropologist with a specialization in Indigenous justice. Her recent works explore the impact of colonization on traditional law ways of the Mi'kmaq of eastern Canada and their contemporary community responses to legal issues. Her current community-based, participatory action collaborative research includes a programme on 'Aboriginal Family Violence – creating meaningful community responses to intimate violence'.

Kenneth Bo NIELSEN is a Research Fellow at SUM (Centre for Development and the Environment, University of Oslo), Norway, and chief consultant at KL (Local Government Denmark). He obtained his Cand. Scient. degree (MA equivalent) in anthropology from the University of Copenhagen in 2005 with a thesis was on urban Indian middle class youth and the Indian state and politics. He then worked on a minor research project on the religious organisation of the Indian Hindu Diaspora in Copenhagen. His current Ph.D. project has the working title: "In Defence of the Land: Rural Social Movements and Urban Activists in India's West Bengal." It analyses the making of a rural social movement opposing government-directed forced land acquisition in the Indian state of West Bengal. His recent publications are: "Not on our land!" Peasants' Struggle against Forced Land Acquisition in India's West Bengal.' Pp. 217-46 in Dan Banik (ed.), Rights and Legal Empowerment in Eradicating Poverty. Farnham: Ashgate (2008); 'Contesting India's Development? Industrialisation, Land Acquisition and Protest in West Bengal.' Forum for Development Studies 37: 145-70 (2010).

Enyinna S. NWAUCHE is Associate Professor of Law at Rivers State University of Science and Technology, Port Harcourt, Nigeria. He is also Director of the Centre for African Legal Studies, a research based advocacy centre dedicated to exploring how African countries have articulated, developed and maintained normative systems which govern their lives. He holds an LLM from Obafemi Awolowo University, Nigeria His recent publications include: "The Dubious Distinction between Principal and Accessory Claims in Nigerian Human Rights Jurisprudence." Journal of African Law 52: 66-88 (2008); "Law Religion and Human Rights in Nigeria." African Human Rights Law Journal 2, available at SSRN: <http://ssrn.com/abstract=1342668> (2008); "A return to the manifest justice principle: a critical examination of the 'reasonable suspicion/apprehension of bias' and 'real possibility of bias' tests for judicial bias in South Africa and England."

Potchefstroom Electronic Law Journal, 12(1) (2009); “The public interest in Namibian copyright law”. Namibian Law Journal 1: 57–80 (2009).

Haitam SULEIMAN is an Arab Israeli, born in Nazareth. In 2009 he was awarded his PhD by Anglia Ruskin University for a dissertation entitled Reviving the Waqf in Palestine/Israel. He undertook field work in Israel/Palestine in 2008-2009.

WANG QILIANG is an associate professor in the Faculty of Law, University of Yunnan, China. Born in Mengzi, Yunnan, China (1977), he was received a Ph.D in the field of Jurisprudence from Yunnan University. He has worked on fieldwork studies in ethnic areas of China since 1995. His recent research has been primarily concerned with legal sociology, legal anthropology and social problems in contemporary China. He is now also a research fellow in the Center of Rural Governance study, Huanzhong University of Science and Technology.

Gordon R. WOODMAN is editor-in-chief of the Journal of Legal Pluralism. See further the section ‘About the Contributors’ in nr. 58 of the Journal of Legal Pluralism.