

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Mariano CROCE is a Pegasus Marie Curie Fellow at the Centre for Law and Cosmopolitan Values, University of Antwerp. He has held the post of Adjunct Professor of Legal Philosophy at Sapienza – University of Rome, and has worked for the Centre for Ethnic Minority Studies based at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. His research includes legal theory, legal pluralism, political philosophy and socio-legal studies. Among his most recent publications are: Self-Sufficiency of Law. A Critical-Institutional Theory of Social Order (Springer, 2012); and, with Andrea Salvatore, The Legal Theory of Carl Schmitt (Routledge, 2012). Contact: mariano.croce@libero.it.

Dr Ann BLACK is a Senior Lecturer in Law at the TC Beirne School of Law, The University of Queensland, and is Deputy Director of its Centre for Public, International and Comparative Law. Her main area of research is the law of Asia with emphasis on the role of Islamic law, and how models of legal pluralism impact on gender, religion and political processes. While her recent book edited with Gary Bell, Law and Legal Institutions of Asia: traditions, adaptations and innovations (Cambridge University Press, 2011) reflects the Asia focus, another direction has been into the burgeoning area of legal and religious pluralism in Australia. It is an issue on which she has published widely with one paper, written with Kerrie Sadiq, ‘Good and bad Sharia: Australia’s mixed response to Islamic law.’ UNSW Law Journal 17(1): 383-412, attracting considerable media and academic commentary. Contact: a.black@law.uq.edu.au.

Ebenezer DUROJAYE, LLB (Lagos), LLM, LLD (Free State), is the Coordinator/Senior Researcher for the Socio-economic Rights Project at the Community Law Centre, University of the Western Cape, Cape Town, South Africa. For more than a decade he has been involved in research and advocacy works on issues relating to socio-economic rights including the rights to housing and health in Africa. His areas of interest include focusing on human rights issues raised by access to HIV/AIDS treatment, intersection between gender inequality and HIV/AIDS response in Africa, women’s health and adolescents sexual and reproductive rights in Africa. Contact: ebenezerdurojaye@gmail.com

Pascale FOURNIER holds the Research Chair in Legal Pluralism and Comparative Law at the University of Ottawa, Faculty of Law, where she is Associate Professor. She received her LL.B from Laval University (1997), her LL.M. from the University of Toronto (2000) and her S.J.D. from Harvard Law School (2007). Before arriving at the University of Ottawa, Pascale lectured at the State University of Haiti, McGill University, the University for Peace in Costa Rica and the Institute for Women's Studies and Research in Iran. Her research touches upon law and religion, contemporary Islam and Judaism, children and women's rights in the context of legal pluralism, comparative law theory and the intersection of criminal law with family law and constitutional law. Her recent publications include: 'Calculating Claims: Jewish and Muslim Women Navigating Religion, Economics and Law in Canada' International Journal of Law in Context 8(1), 47-72 (2012); 'Honour Crimes and the Law - Public Policy in an Age of Globalization - Guest Editor's Introduction to the Special Issue' Canadian Criminal Law Review 16(2) 103-114 (2012); 'Borders and Crossroads: Comparative Perspectives on Minorities and Conflicts of Laws' Emory International Law Review 25(2), 987-1006 (2011); Muslim Marriage in Western Courts: Lost in Transplantation. Farnham, UK: Ashgate (2010). Currently in press are: (with Aida Setrakian & Pascal McDougall) 'No Fault Talaq: Islamic Divorce in Canadian Immigration and Family law', in Rubya Mehdi, Jørgen S. Nielsen & Werner Menski (eds.), Anthology on Gender Equality and Muslim Law of Divorce, DJØF Publishing: Copenhagen (2012); (with Aida Setrakian) 'False Jurisdictions? A Revisionist Take on Customary (Religious) Law in Germany' Texas International Law Journal 48(3) (2013); 'Quand 'l'Internationale', c'est aussi le national qui dérange: la théorie critique dans les coulisses du religieux', in Rémi Bachand (ed.), Théories critiques et droit international, Bruylant: Brussels (2013). Contact: Pascale.Fournier@uottawa.ca

Martina LOCHER, from Switzerland, is a PhD student and teaching associate at the Department of Geography, University of Zürich. She completed her Master of Geography in 2005 with a thesis on gender issues in an integrated nature conservation and development project in Nepal. From 2005 to 2009, she worked as a coordinator in an international research programme in Switzerland and in development projects with UNDP and GTZ in Bangladesh. Her current PhD research aims at contributing to a more detailed understanding of land acquisition procedures and the effects of transnational land deals for local livelihoods in Tanzania. Her publications include: "“We could show the men, that we are able to do it”: Women's-development approach in the Kanchenjunga Conservation Area Project, East Nepal." Pp. 267-284 in Smita Premchander and Christine Müller (eds.), Gender and Sustainable Development: Case Studies from NCCR North-South. Bern: Geographica Bernensia (2006); (with Ulrike Müller-Böker) "“But now men also listen to the women”: Women's-development approach in the Kanchenjunga Conservation Area Project, East Nepal." Asiatische Studien / Etudes asiatique Suisse LXI: 1113- 1139 (2007); "“How come others are selling our land?” Customary land rights, rural livelihoods and foreign land acquisition in the case of a UK-based forestry company in Tanzania'. Presented at International Conference on Global Land Grabbing, at the Institute of Development Studies, University of Sussex, Brighton (2011, draft conference paper). Contact: martina.locher@geo.uzh.ch.

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Ido SHAHAR is a lecturer at the Department of Middle Eastern History at the University of Haifa, Israel. He has been a Post-Doctoral Research Fellow at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Tel Aviv University, University of Oxford, and Queen Mary University London. Shahar is a legal anthropologist specializing in Islamic law and its application, particularly in shari'a courts. His fields of research include the anthropology of law; the Palestinian minority in Israel; legal pluralism; and Muslim rural societies. He has published on these topics in Islamic Law and Society, Theoretical Inquiries in Law, Political and Legal Anthropology Review, and other journals. His book on the institutional and political dynamics of legal pluralism in Jerusalem is forthcoming from Ashgate. Contact: idoshah@gmail.com

Bernd STEIMANN received his PhD degree in geography at the University of Zürich, Switzerland in 2010. For his doctoral studies he based his field research in Kyrgyzstan, focussing on rural development and socio-economic disparities, the governance and management of alpine pastures, and processes of post-socialist transformation. From 2002 to 2005 he researched the often-strained relations between state and non-state actors in regard to forest management in Northern Pakistan. More recently he has worked as a research fellow at the University of Zürich and the Centre for Development and Environment (CDE) at the University of Berne, Switzerland. Today he works as a development policy coordinator with the Swiss NGO HELVETAS Swiss Intercooperation. Previous relevant publications include: Making a Living in Uncertainty: Agro-pastoral Livelihoods and Institutional Transformations in Post-socialist Kyrgyzstan. Bishkek and Zürich: Human Geography Series (26) (2010); (with Nadia Schoch and Susan Thieme); 'Migration and animal husbandry: Competing or complementary livelihood strategies. Evidence from Kyrgyzstan.' Natural Resources Forum, 34: 211-221 (2010); Decentralization and Participation in the Forestry Sector of NWFP, Pakistan - The Role of the State. NCCR N-S Dialogue Paper (7) (2004); and (with U. Geiser) 'State actors' livelihoods, acts of translation, and forest sector reforms in northwest Pakistan.' Contemporary South Asia 13(4): 437-448 (2004). Contact: bernd.steimann@helvetas.org

Bishnu Raj UPRETI, from Nepal, completed his PhD on conflict management from Wageningen University, the Netherlands in 2001. He specializes in conflict management and works as a senior researcher at NCCR North-South. He has written on the issues of resource conflict, peace, state-building and unconventional security. Some of his previous related publications include: ‘Relationships between resource governance and resource conflict: Nepalese experience.’ Journal of Legal Pluralism 50: 71-100 (2004); (with Ulrike Müller-Böker) Nepal from War to Peace: Legacies of the Past and Hopes for Future. New Delhi: Adroit Publishers (2009); (with Sagar Raj Sharma and Jagat Basnet) Land Politics and Conflict in Nepal: Realities and Potentials for Agrarian Transformation. Kathmandu: Community Self Reliance Centre, Human and Natural Resources Studies Centre, Kathmandu University and RCO NCCR North-South (2009); (with Sagar Raj Sharma, Kailash Nath Pyakuryal and Safal Ghimire) The Remake of a State: Post Conflict Challenges and State Building in Nepal. Kathmandu: HNRSC and South Asia Regional Coordination Office of NCCR North-South (2010); Livelihood Insecurity and Social Conflict in Nepal. Kathmandu: RCO NCCR North-South (2010); and (with Kailash Nath Pyakuryal) Land, Agriculture and Agrarian Transformation. Kathmandu: Consortium for Land Research and Policy Dialogue (COLARP) (2011). Besides conducting research, he also teaches at the School of Arts, Kathmandu University. He is actively engaged with policy makers, politicians and the national and international media on the issues of Nepal’s armed conflict and peace process. Bishnu Upreti is currently the South Asia Regional Coordinator of NCCR North-South, a global research network active in addressing the challenges of sustainable development. Contact: bupreti@nccr.wlink.com.np.